

Remote Support Finding the Right Direction

ScreenConnect Enterprise Solutions

Do you need customized remote support software?

ScreenConnect is a self-hosted remote support application; that out of the box provides a wide array of software features aimed to help users provide a variety of service and support offerings.

But sometimes out of the box doesn't fulfill the diverse requirements of the enterprise customer. For these customers who require more advanced customization, integration, and training we have developed our ScreenConnect Enterprise Solutions.

ScreenConnect Enterprise Solutions was developed specifically for those organizations that need a remote support software solution tailored to their unique needs. A solution designed to meet specific branding and technical requirements, while maintain the highest level of quality and software stability. Our account executives will work with each enterprise customer to define their current and future needs and work with them to integrate a solution designed just for them.

SCREENCONNECT
REMOTE SUPPORT SOFTWARE

ScreenConnect was designed to provide customers with a self-hosted remote support solution that could adapt to changes in demand, security, and efficiency as the business climate dictated. Our goal was to provide customers with a quality remote support tool that operated on-premise eliminating the costly monthly licensing fees and maintenance costs of SaaS solutions.

All organizations regardless of size or vertical see a lot of the same things; demanding customers, shortened response times in SLA's, unorthodox PC configurations, and more. But enterprise organizations see these problems on a larger scale. Therefore the demand for quality, flexibility, security, and scalability are more pronounced and key to overall business success.

One of our enablement experts will work with each enterprise customers to review current use model, implementation ideas/plans, corporate training needs, and required product features. Through this exploration our team will develop a tailored ScreenConnect solution tailored for the organization. No more modifying business processes to fit the software, ScreenConnect will change to fit the needs of our customers.
